AFFECTATION.

Of old a spade was called a "spade," By simple and by sages: A "workmen" did his honest " work," A "servant" earned their wages,

A "man" was a title of respect, Whatever virtue named it: There was but one higher worth, And lovely "woman" claimed it. But now we masquerade with words-The truth a great offence is-

And descerate our English tongue By pride and false pretences. We shame the language of our sires, We talk so mild and meekly, We've "operatives" for working men,

And draw our "salaries" weekly; Our "lady" takes the place of "wife," That word so true and hearty; And every man's a "gentleman," Unless we call him "party." The "shopman" hates the name of "shop,"

The man who digs a railroad trench Is called a "navigator." O give me back our honest speech, It hath a soul of beauty; And let us do our daily "work,"

And by perversion later,

And think it pleasant duty, Let's earn our "wages" as of yore-The world can never harm us: Let's love our "sweathearts" and our wiver And own that woman charms us, So shall our actions, like our words, Be void of affectation,
